Stratus Technologies Named Among Top 100 Providers of Financial Technology

Prestigious recognition reflects long-standing commitment to the financial services industry

MAYNARD, Mass. November 9, 2007 -- Stratus Technologies, Inc., the availability company, today announced its ranking on the FinTech 100, an annual international listing of the top vertical technology vendors that derive more than one-third of annual revenues from the financial services industry, as named by research firm Financial Insights and American Banker magazine.

“In no business is the need for continuous application availability more necessary than it is in financial services, because the potential costs and impact of downtime are so pronounced,” said Philip Izzo, Stratus director of financial services. “This industry has been Stratus’ leading vertical market for more than two decades. Recognition as a FinTech 100 company attests to the value of the solutions we provide to our customers.”

Working with leading software providers, Stratus delivers financial services solutions and professional services to institutions worldwide, including eight of the top ten banks and three of the top five securities firms. Customers depend on Stratus to reduce the chance of system outages or service interruptions.

Stratus ranked 72 on the list of financial technology companies that were judged according to their global revenues, attesting to the company’s stability and importance to the industry.
